

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT

NORTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

CLARENCE WILLIAMS,

Plaintiff,

v.

UNITED AIRLINES, INC.,

Defendant.

No. C 19-02988 WHA

ORDER DENYING MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT

In this case for race discrimination and retaliation brought by an African American pilot against United Airlines, United moves for summary judgment. Our plaintiff is Clarence Williams. He has flown as a commercial airline pilot for over twenty years, including eleven for United. He was eventually promoted to fleet technical manager (FTM). In 2017, he was forced to choose between a Performance Improvement Plan (PIP) and a demotion to pilot. When he chose neither, he was demoted back to pilot (Williams Decl. ¶¶ 22–26, Williams Exh. 9 at 3).

Evidence of discrimination may be circumstantial or direct. See Wallis v. J.R. Simplot Co., 26 F.3d 885, 889 (9th Cir. 1994), as amended on denial of reh'g (July 14, 1994). A plaintiff may establish a prima facie case of disparate treatment by presenting evidence that an “employment decision was based on a discriminatory criterion illegal under the [Civil Rights] Act.” Cordova

1 v. State Farm Ins. Companies, 124 F.3d 1145, 1148–49 (9th Cir. 1997), quoting International
2 Brotherhood of Teamsters v. United States, 431 U.S. 324, 358 (1977).

3 With respect to the adverse employment action, this order holds that a jury could 4 reasonably find that forcing Williams to choose between a PIP and a demotion constituted an 5 adverse employment action. Contrary to James v. C-Tran, 130 F. App'x 156 (9th Cir. 2005),
6 Williams submits evidence, discussed below, that imposing a choice of the PIP versus demotion
7 represented unlawful discrimination and/or retaliation. In James, the appellant employee raised 8 this issue for the first time on appeal, so the panel simply refused to entertain the argument.
9 Moreover, James involved a bus driver. Airlines are vastly different. In no way does James 10 stand for the proposition that a choice between a PIP and a demotion is never an adverse 11 employment action. United's argument is rejected. A jury will have to decide.

12 The next element in consideration is whether there is sufficient proof of discrimination to 13 go to the jury. Putting aside for the moment the 2016 "at the trough" evidence, there 14 nevertheless is sufficient evidence to go to the jury.

15 Williams presents evidence that he was treated differently and that it was due to race. He 16 states that Supervisor Cormican used demeaning language, which created a "hostile" work 17 environment in July 2017 ("I'll sit next to Clarence in case I need to slap him around") and in 18 September 2017 ("Think before you speak" and "Woah woah woah you didn't just hear" 19 Williams say "that"). In addition, Cormican penalized Williams in his 2016 year-end report for 20 failure to log a specific number of flights (monthly) on the 787 fleet. Cormican admits that when 21 he assessed Williams' flight hours, he did not look at other FTMs' flight hours during the 22 relevant period; nor has United asserted a standard number of hours it expects of FTMs. These 23 omissions create a question for the jury as to whether Williams labored against tougher 24 performance expectations than other FTMs (Cormican Jan. 22 Dep. at 82, Williams Exh. 10 at 6, 25 Williams Exh. A ¶ 16, Williams Exh. 19, Cormican Decl. ¶ 4).

26 At least one other United employee has observed Williams receive what she believed to be 27 race-based differential treatment. While investigating Williams' EEOC complaint, United 28 sought information from Training Program Manager Mary Smith who worked at the Denver

1 Flight Training Center. She and Williams worked in close physical proximity in Denver. Smith
2 wrote in an email to United,

3 I have seen & [sic] overheard Jay speaking to his team, who sit in the 4 same area as I. The way in which he has spoken to Clarence is 5 derogatory & demeaning in my opinion, in comparison to the way
6 that he spoke to other members of his team. This includes calling
7 Clarence into his office with a commanding voice vs asking other 8 team members if they could please come to his office.

9 She believes differential treatment came “on the basis of race” (Williams Exh. 45). She will 10 have to testify in person (not via the email) but the email is an adequate substitute for this 11 motion.

12 It is true that United has its side of the story on all of these points but a jury must decide 13 whether (or not) to believe it.

14 If the “back at the trough” monologue by Supervisor Weigland comes into evidence, there
15 will be even more evidence of discrimination and racial animus. The same evidence listed
16 above would be sufficient to show pretext. Additionally, Williams presents evidence of his own 17 communication skills and accomplishments; strong peer reviews and technical work; and 18 correspondence in which he disputes his alleged errors. That is, even though United articulates
19 legitimate, non-discriminatory reasons for its adverse employment action, Williams’ above
20 evidence would also serve to show that those reasons were pretext (Williams Exh. 19 at 1–2, 21 Williams Exh. 39 at 1, Williams Exh. 14 at 2, Weigland Jan. Dep. 89–92, Williams Decl. at 22 ¶¶ 35–36, Williams Exh. 35 at 1).

23 “The evaluation of a pilot’s communication skills . . . requires a subjective evaluation of 24 the pilot’s attitude, manner, tone, and other similar traits — evaluations that are inherently 25 subjective.” Nicholson v. Hyannis Air Serv., Inc., 580 F.3d 1116, 1123–24 (9th Cir. 2009). Our 26 court of appeals has cautioned that the use of such subjective criteria (in the hiring context) is 27 “particularly susceptible to discriminatory abuse and should be closely scrutinized.” Warren v.
28 City of Carlsbad, 58 F.3d 439, 443 (9th Cir. 1995) (citation omitted). So too here.

United argues that by hiring First Officer Faye Matthews, who identifies as African American in “part,” it has raised an inference of non-discriminatory motivation. United cites to

1 Black v. Baxter Healthcare Corp., No. CV 93-4001 JGD (RNBx), 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 22984
 2 (C.D. Cal. Apr. 26, 1996) (Judge Jacqueline Nguyen), aff'd 129 F.3d 124 (9th Cir. 1997). This 3 decision is not citable because it does not fall within our court of appeals' limited exceptions to 4 the rule against considering unpublished pre-2007 decisions. See Fed. R. App. P. 32.1(a)(ii).

5 More importantly United's argument fails because, to show that Williams was treated less 6 favorably than his non-African American colleagues, he "need not show that he was replaced by 7 a member of a different race." Rather, he must show that his demotion "occurred under 8 circumstances giving rise to an inference of discrimination." Aragon v. Republic Silver State
 9 Disposal Inc., 292 F.3d 654, 660 (9th Cir. 2002), as amended (July 18, 2002) (citations omitted).
 10 Nonetheless, Matthews' and Williams' biographies differ. For instance, she was hired holding 11 the lower rank of first officer, not captain, and United has not established that she shares his 12 racial identity. Most importantly, Williams' existing prima facie evidence of discrimination
 13 outweighs any inference of non-discrimination United might raise by virtue of hiring another 14 African American professional, or so a reasonable jury could find (Williams Decl. ¶ 32, United 15 Exh. I at 28–29).

16 With respect to the retaliation claim, Williams must show that he engaged in protected
 17 activity, that United subjected him to an adverse employment action and that there was a causal 18 link between the protected activity and United's action.

19 Williams engaged in protected activity by cooperating with another African American pilot 20 in that pilot's separate and earlier lawsuit against United. A reasonable jury could conclude that 21 United decided to return Williams to the line as a result of that assistance. On December 5,
 22 2017, Supervisor Cormican sat for a deposition in the other African American pilot's
 23 discrimination lawsuit against United. From the questioning, Cormican could tell that Williams
 24 had provided cooperation and evidence to the other pilot. By letter dated December 8, Cormican 25 demoted Williams. A reasonable jury could infer that the cooperation was the true reason for the 26 demotion. The close timing of these two events (three days apart) will support a verdict of 27 retaliation (Mot. Summ. J. at 9, Cormican Dep. 140–142, Williams Exh. 27 at 2, 5).
 28

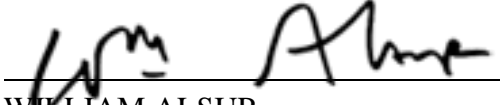

1 With respect to United's defense based on after-acquired evidence, a jury will have to 2 decide whether United really would have fired Williams for eavesdropping on a supervisor's call 3 or for the other reasons now proffered.

4 United objects to much of Williams' evidence. United has not complied with Local Rule
5 7-3(c), which requires evidentiary objections within its reply. The objections are denied on that 6 ground. Regardless, the evidence cited in this order and its companion addressing the Wiretap
7 Act is admissible with one partial exception. United objects to Smith's email to "Kim Phillips, 8 and Garrison[] Phillips," for many reasons including that it states a legal conclusion. This 9 objection is SUSTAINED with respect to the word "discrimination." The remainder will be 10 admissible if Smith is subpoenaed.

11 Williams has withdrawn his ERISA Section 510 claim, so United's motion on that claim is 12 DENIED AS MOOT. The motion for summary judgment on all remaining claims is DENIED.
